

Report Comments for High Level

is a diligent student who is achieving above average results in most subjects. He is to be commended on the thoughtful and mature approach he brings to his studies.

is socially mature, courteous and cooperative. His personal development and academic progress are both pleasing.

has gained an excellent semester report through consistent application to his studies. He is polite, friendly and cooperative in homeroom.

is a reliable and effective class captain His sense of humour and positive attitude contribute much to the homeroom.

has maintained a consistent effort throughout the semester to achieve these fine results. He is cooperative and responsible in homeroom.

is a confident and motivated student who has worked consistently and to a high standard.

shows strong leadership qualities within the homeroom group, working from his own initiative and respecting the rights of others.

has been a positive influence in homeroom.

is a confident and motivated student who has worked steadily to achieve this fine result.

is a mature and cooperative student who is making the most of his talents. His diligent approach to his studies has resulted in this excellent report.

is always well presented and punctual.

is punctual, well-presented, friendly and a cheerful member of our class community. He has achieved very pleasing results through consistent application to his studies and has been rewarded with a fine report. He is a willing participant in homeroom and house activities.

has demonstrated a mature attitude towards his studies and has been rewarded with a fine report. He contributes to the positive atmosphere of homeroom through his cooperation and house activities.

has demonstrated an excellent attitude towards his studies and has been rewarded with excellent results across his entire academic program. He contributes to the positive atmosphere of homeroom through his cooperation and participation in all house activities.

is a genuinely friendly, cooperative and reliable young man. His attitude and behaviour demonstrate maturity. He is working well and achieving excellent results in most of his subjects.

is a genuinely friendly, cooperative and reliable young man. He has set clear goals and has worked consistently towards achieving these. He is encouraged to continue, and to build upon his established pattern of study in order to exploit his full potential.

's individual subject reports indicate that he is a cooperative, enthusiastic and self-motivated student. In his interaction with peers and teachers alike he demonstrates an awareness of, and a sensitivity to the needs of others.

has worked consistently to achieve an excellent report. He is always polite, friendly and helpful in homeroom. He makes the most of his talents and participates fully in all school activities.

demonstrates a positive attitude towards his studies and thoroughly deserves his excellent results. He has excelled in his capacity as class captain and his maturity, good sense and reliability are greatly appreciated.

has a positive attitude towards his studies and thoroughly deserves his excellent results. He demonstrates leadership qualities in homeroom and his maturity, good sense and reliability are greatly appreciated.

is a bright, talented and enthusiastic young man, always punctual, courteous and well-presented. He has achieved very pleasing results through consistent application to his studies.

brings a positive attitude to his studies. He is working to his capacity and achieving pleasing results. He shows initiative and is always willing to help and to become actively involved in all homeroom, house and school activities.

brings a positive attitude to his studies. He is working to his capacity and achieving pleasing results. He shows initiative and is always willing to become actively involved in all activities. He has made excellent contributions to the sporting life of the school.

brings a positive attitude to his studies. He is working to his capacity and achieving pleasing results. He shows initiative and is always willing to become actively involved in all school activities. He has made excellent contributions to the cultural life of the school.

is a most polite, caring and well behaved young man. He has performed remarkably well in some subjects and is encouraged to apply already successful study skills to his less successful subject areas.

has achieved some excellent results. He has developed sound study skills which should, if maintained, provide a firm foundation upon which to build, leading up to his final examinations. He makes a positive contribution to all house activities.

is a polite, helpful and well presented student. During this semester he has successfully focused on improving his academic performance. He is encouraged to maintain regular study habits and a positive attitude in order to build on these results.

has shown himself to be a responsible and mature young man, dedicated to his studies. He is encouraged to continue his positive outlook and successful study habits in order to maintain these excellent results.

has an awareness of the needs of others and responds generously to class and community projects. He has achieved excellent academic results through consistent application to studies.

has an awareness of the needs of others and responds generously to class and community projects. He has achieved excellent academic results through consistent application to his studies. He is encouraged to maintain his positive attitude and his successful study skills.

is a polite, helpful and well presented student. He has adapted well to the demands of senior studies. Continued application to regular study, homework and assessments will ensure that he develops his full potential.

Report Comments for Medium level

is a diligent student who is achieving above average results in all subjects. He is to be commended on the thoughtful and mature approach he brings to his studies.

is coping well with the demands of senior courses and has developed a sound study pattern.

is making steady progress. He would benefit from further development of his organisational skills. He has been a cooperative member of his homeroom group.

is making steady progress and has achieved some pleasing results. His common sense and willingness to help in homeroom are greatly appreciated,

's subject teachers are pleased with his application to his studies and contributions in class. He is a courteous and reliable member of his homeroom group.

is working well and achieving pleasing results. He has a positive attitude and is always considerate of the needs of others in the homeroom group. His behaviour is exemplary.

could contribute to the homeroom group by giving more attention to his punctuality. He is always well presented and courteous.

is a cooperative, well presented and friendly member of the homeroom group. His overall results are satisfactory. He has displayed a positive attitude to his work in most areas and should now develop his study skills to improve in the subjects where he is less successful.

has shown himself to be an earnest, pleasant and responsible student with an agreeable, cooperative and courteous nature. There are some areas of concern, academically, which would be rectified through better organisation and regular study patterns.

has developed a productive work pattern in most subject areas and is being much more responsible in his interaction with others. He is encouraged to maintain this effort next semester.

is generous and positive within the homeroom group and presents himself well. His report indicates that there is room for improvement in his academic work. In order to reach his potential, he needs to develop an organised and thorough approach to both class and home work.

is a quiet and cooperative student who presents himself well. He has achieved some positive and encouraging comments from his subject teachers. He is encouraged to maintain, and to extend, his application in all areas.

is a mature and dependable member of the homeroom group. He is always cheerful, good humoured and friendly. With a little more effort and concentration in class, his overall report will improve.

's results are somewhat mixed. Improvement in the weakest areas will depend upon better organisation, concentration and attention to detail when completing homework and major assignments. He is always helpful, polite and cooperative in homeroom.

generally cooperates in homeroom activities. He is gradually adopting a more positive attitude to school and has achieved some success in his subjects. However, a more consistent approach to class work, home study and revision would produce improvement.

has achieved solid results in virtually all areas of study, It is suggested that he applies the study habits he has found successful to subjects where he has been less successful. He is friendly and helpful towards other members in his homeroom group.

is a friendly, helpful and very cooperative student. He often volunteers his services and willingly performs all tasks required. His class teachers have indicated that he works to the best of his ability.

is a friendly, courteous and well presented young man who has made a reasonable effort in most subjects. His report indicates that greater concentration is needed in some areas.

is attentive and cooperative in homeroom activities. His academic results are satisfactory in some subjects but he needs to develop his study skills to better his performance in others.

is a positive, well mannered student who offers his best in homeroom activities. He has performed well in some subjects and is making progress in others. He is encouraged to maintain his efforts.

is a cheerful young man whose friendly disposition is appreciated by all. He has gained a satisfactory report. With more effort and concentration in class, however, he could gain the better results of which he is capable.

is a quiet and reserved young man who has achieved some good results. Greater confidence in his own abilities and fuller participation will contribute to his development overall.

is a very quiet, unassuming member of homeroom who contributes positively when asked. His academic results are more than satisfactory. Greater participation, however, would contribute positively to his personal and academic development.

is an energetic student with a positive attitude to homeroom activities. He has made excellent contributions to the sporting life of the school. Some of this energy needs to be directed towards better organisation and more regular study habits would see his academic results improve.

is a delightful young man. His cheerful and friendly disposition is appreciated by his peers. However, it seems that he has the potential to perform better with a more attentive and concentrated approach in class and to homework.

is a well behaved, polite and friendly student. There is evidence that he is taking steps to remedy those areas where improvement is needed. He must continue to do so throughout the next semester.

has an awareness of the needs of others and responds generously to class and community projects. His report comments indicate that he is working to his capacity. He is encouraged to maintain his efforts towards study.

is a well behaved, polite and friendly student. His report comments indicate that he is working to his capacity. He is encouraged to maintain his efforts towards study.

has received positive and encouraging comments concerning his attitude and application to studies. He makes positive contributions to homeroom, house activities and school, and is well respected by his peers.

is a very friendly and cooperative student within homeroom. It appears that he works well in class. However, his results indicate the necessity to develop a better examination technique and he is encouraged to discuss this matter with his subject teachers.

is a quiet member of homeroom who is generally reliable and well mannered. It appears that he is not making consistent efforts across all subject areas. It is recommended that he develop a program of regular study and revision throughout the entire semester.

makes a positive contribution to the house. However, his results, though satisfactory, do not match his potential. It is strongly recommended that he manage his time to include regular study and revision. An improvement in this area would result in better academic achievement.

is cooperative and displays leadership qualities. He has achieved satisfactory results in most areas. It would be to his advantage, however, to focus upon improving organisation of home time to include regular study and revision.

has not performed according to his ability. It is heartening, however, to have witnessed a much more responsible and cooperative approach of late within homeroom. He is encouraged to extend this positive attitude to his studies through better organisation and concentration.

's participation in homeroom has improved in the past weeks. He no doubt realises that a positive attitude, involvement and the avoidance of distraction make him a happier person. An extension of this to his classes will also improve his academic results.

prefers, and performs better in, practical subjects. However, all areas are important and he must concentrate better in all classes next semester. This includes homeroom where he has been far too chatty, though always charming.

is sometimes talkative in homeroom when he should be listening to announcements but is generally cooperative and always friendly. It appears that he needs to make a special effort to improve in some subjects through greater concentration in class.

appears to have settled into the demands of senior studies. His results indicate that he not only needs to complete all homework, but also to develop a program of regular study and revision.

Report Comments for Poor Level

needs to give more attention to his punctuality and presentation.

is sometimes forgetful of the needs of others in the homeroom.

's progress is hindered by his frequent absences.

's results point to a need to improve his commitment to his studies. By setting short and long term goals for himself he could see a significant improvement across the next semester.

's results indicate the need for a more structured homework and examination preparation program.

has shown that he has difficulty in following directions and in self-organisation. A focus on these skills would prove very beneficial to him in both his school years and in his future career.

is sometimes loud and inappropriate within homeroom and the classroom, However, improvement in his behaviour of late has been noted. Both his academic and personal development will progress if he pauses before commenting and concentrates on class and homework.

does not put enough effort into behaving in an appropriate and considerate manner, nor into his studies. When reprimanded he does respond for a short time, but a much more serious attitude is essential for personal, social and academic growth.

is an open and friendly young man. Whilst these are valuable qualities, his comments are often inappropriate in nature and in the volume at which they are spoken. It is obvious that he is not performing to his capacity academically.

is a pleasant and generally cooperative young man, although he doesn't always recognise occasions which require a serious approach. Thus, he is not achieving to his potential academically.

is a quiet and generally cooperative young man. However, teachers' comments and academic results indicate that he needs to develop a more serious approach and to put into place an organised system of home study and revision.

is a friendly and helpful student to have in homeroom. His academic results will improve if he listens attentively and starts concentrating in class. It is important for him to make the most of his abilities.

has had a difficult year, but has shown some improvements of late. He has a lot to offer but finds it difficult to direct his energies in a positive manner. As a first step, he should look to improve in areas such as punctuality, neatness and courtesy.

's homeroom behaviour is often inappropriate and inconsiderate. It is clear that he is choosing to extend this lack of cooperation into most of his classes. He must reflect, check his comments and actions, begin to be punctual and give time to study.

is a polite and helpful student in homeroom. There are, however, matters in his subject classes that need attention. Regular completion of homework and revision should be a priority next semester.

is a friendly and pleasant young man in homeroom and is very involved in his peer group. He does need to pay more attention to his appearance by wearing his uniform with pride. Greater attention in class and regular home study will help him to improve his academic achievement.

s' manner of responding to adults and peers has improved though his words and actions are still principally self-serving. He must continue to reflect upon the needs of others. It is clear that an improved attitude will help his academic progress.

is attentive in his classes and is not applying himself to the best of his ability. He must reflect before he speaks, set clear goals and consider the needs of others. Personal development in this area will also result in better academic achievement.

is inattentive in his classes and is not applying himself to the best of his ability. He needs to set clear goals and take positive steps towards formulating and following an achievable program of regular study and revision.

is generous and positive within homeroom and presents himself well. His report indicates that there is room for improvement in his academic work. In order to discover his potential, he needs to develop an organised and thorough approach to both class and homework.

s' academic results indicate that he needs to develop a more positive attitude toward school. Taking small measured steps towards achieving realistic goals would help approach study and relationships positively and with more confidence.

is a friendly and generally cooperative student who appears to be finding it difficult to manage the demands of senior study with outside interests and commitments. He needs to reflect upon his priorities and to seek help in formulating clear and achievable goals.

s' results indicate that he needs to develop a more positive and committed attitude towards his academic program. He needs to reflect upon his goals and take positive steps towards formulating and following an achievable program of regular study and revision.

s' results indicate that he needs to develop a more committed attitude towards his academic program. He needs to reflect upon his priorities, set goals and take positive steps towards formulating and following an achievable program of regular study and revision.

is a friendly and generally cooperative student who appears to be finding it difficult to manage the demands of senior study. He needs to reflect upon his priorities and to seek help in formulating clear and achievable goals, as well as developing a program of regular study.

is a friendly and cheerful member of homeroom. However, he does not appear to have adapted to the demands of senior studies. He needs to participate fully in the classroom situation, to set achievable goals, and to develop a program of regular study.